Dear Mr. Webster:

Enclosed for your information is a copy of the Social Security Administration 1988 Annual Report to the Congress. This report presents highlights of the Social Security programs and focuses on our activities aimed at achieving major agency priorities.

One of these priorities is providing the best possible service to the public. We have expanded telephone service, extended office hours at appropriate locations, and encouraged our customers to schedule appointments. Some 85 percent of our clients responding to a General Accounting Office (GAO) survey described their contacts with Social Security as "good to very good."

The annual report reaffirms the program's continuing fiscal integrity. It notes that reserves in the combined Social Security trust funds grew by nearly $20 billion in fiscal year 1987. We expect the reserves to continue to grow.

As you may know, the GAO has recommended that all Federal agencies issue annual reports that incorporate financial statements. In recognition of this need for a public accounting of Social Security's financial stewardship, I am particularly proud of this year's report, which, for the first time, includes audited financial statements. These statements fully disclose fiscal information on all agency administered programs. The statements follow the standards and form prescribed by the GAO for all Federal agencies and were prepared under the supervision of Social Security's Chief Financial Officer, a position created in 1987.

Sincerely,

Dorcas R. Hardy
